1. Course Description

1.1 Context

Course overview:

Organization Behavior is the study of human behavior in organizational settings, the interface between human behavior and the organization, and the organization itself. This course, therefore, encourages students to better understand, explain, and yet improve human behavior in organizations. Particularly, students will understand how some factors, such as individual characteristics, group processes and organizational design (including structure, mechanism, culture as well as RPPS), would influence work and organizational performance.

Organizational Behavior can be divided into three levels, i.e., the study of:

1. individuals in organizations ('micro-level'),
2. work groups ('meso-level'), and
3. how organizations behave ('macro-level').

Prerequisites: Industrial/Organizational Psychology, Introduction to Management, Psychometrics, Statistics.

2.2 Course specific objectives

Upon completion of this course, I hope you will:

1. Gain an overall understanding of the theories and concepts of organizational behavior at the individual, group and organizational levels.
2. Obtain the insights on the factors that influence individual, group and organizational performance.
3. Acquire a set of skills that allow you to manage and improve performance, commitment and satisfaction in organizations.

Meanwhile, you should be able to:

1. Demonstrate comprehension of key concepts and theories by actively participating in class discussions and group works.
2. Apply analytic skills in simulated settings relating to various aspects of organizational behavior.
3. Synthesize multiple perspectives and theories of organizational behavior by writing and presenting group reports.
4. Evaluate the ability of different theories to explain organizational problems in team projects.
5. Enhance teamwork skills through group exercises.

2.3 Assessment/Grading Details

To maximize learning in this required course, all participants are expected to read assigned materials before each class meeting, attend lectures, actively participate in class activities, conduct independent share of work in and contribute substantially to the group projects (such as case studies, news reports, and journal papers). Students are strongly encouraged to bring questions and thoughts to the class. The overall performance will be evaluated on the basis of individual achievement as well as the contribution to group tasks. Specifically, the overall grades in this course (100%) will be assigned on the basis of performance on the following items:

- (1) Class Active Participation, 20%
- (2) Group Work, 30%
- (3) Final (closed-book exam) 50%

Please NOTE: Anyone who has missed 4 lectures or more, for whatever reason, will automatically “Fail” this course.

- (1) Class Active Participation (20%). Since this is a required course, all participants are supposed to show up in every class meeting. Class activities will be based on the assumption that the student read the assigned readings before each class; therefore, students should be prepared for class meetings and actively participate in discussions of assigned materials, answer questions, and make critical comments. The quantity and quality of the student’s contribution in class will determine the participation grade. Students should plan to attend every class and be on time. Regular lateness and/or leaving early will result in a diminishing participation grade. Needless to say, no show-up in the classroom shall deteriorate your participation performance evaluation in the same way, but severely.
- (2) Group Work (30%). Students will be purposely assigned to a group of 5 members and work together for case or paper studies that come along with certain chapters. Group members are expected to work on the project together, to share their analyses with, and to response critics from, other members.
- (3) Final (50%). The final examination will cover all the materials that I have delivered in class or presented in the required textbook, up to the very last day of lecturing. Therefore, I wish you fully understand those important organizational behavior concepts, classical theories and model that explain individual or collective behaviors in the workplace.

2.4 Academic Honesty and Plagiarism

It is important for a student’s effort and credit to be recognized through class assessment. Credits earned for a student work due to efforts done by others are clearly unfair. Deliberate dishonesty is considered academic misconducts, which include plagiarism; cheating on assignments or examinations; engaging in unauthorized collaboration on academic work; taking, acquiring, or using test materials without faculty permission; submitting false or incomplete records of academic achievement; acting alone or in cooperation with another to falsify records or to obtain dishonestly grades, honors, awards, or professional endorsement; or altering, forging, or misusing a University academic record; or fabricating or falsifying of data, research procedures, or data analysis.

All assessments are subject to academic misconduct check. Misconduct check may include reproducing the assessment, providing a copy to another member of faculty, and/or communicate a copy of this assignment to the PHBS Discipline Committee. A suspected plagiarized document/assignment submitted to a plagiarism checking service may be kept in its database for future reference purpose.

Where violation is suspected, penalties will be implemented. The penalties for academic misconduct may include: deduction of honor points, a mark of zero on the assessment, a fail grade for the whole course, and reference of the matter to the Peking University Registrar.
